

Karing for Klonder Bocce Ball Benefit for Jennifer Klonder-Cassin

Jennifer Klonder-Cassin is fighting for her life.

Jennifer was diagnosed with ALS (Lou Gehrig's disease) in early 2009 but because she's a strong-spirited, hold-nothing-back kind of woman, she's determined to fight with everything she has "to beat this thing!"

ALS(Lou Gehrig's disease) is a neuromuscular disorder that causes progressive paralysis. Currently treatment is aimed at symptomatic relief and quality of life. There is no cure!

But even with her strength and fortitude, she's facing a mighty tough opponent with ALS. David, her husband of just seven years, and her 3 year-old twin children, are praying and pulling for her every single day. But the battle is rough. She's already struggling to eat, to walk, to speak and to even sleep; all the things we take for granted.

As if this difficult disease wasn't a big enough battle for her, Jennifer and her family are now also facing many medical bills, care giving challenges, and child raising issues that have strained all their resources. They need help.

Those of us who know her, who love her, and who want to help her win this fight, have put together a fund raising campaign so she can fight with all her strength and all her dignity. Please look in your heart, donate whatever you can and help Jennifer stay strong! And please add Jennifer to your prayers because miracles do happen.

Jennifer needs your help and your prayers to win this battle not because she's weak, but because she wants to stay strong.
